Versuchen bleibt es bei einer:

Karl I. (1625–49) setzte die Tradition der Ständeversammlung fort, die im 17. Jahrhundert die politische Grundlage der englischen Revolution bildete.

6. Scotland: a country where the people live in the country and not in the cities. The land is sparsely populated, and the people are generally poor. Scotland is noted for its beautiful scenery, particularly in the Highlands and the islands.

7. Scottish history is a long and complex story. It began with the Celts, who arrived in Scotland around 600 BC. The Celts were followed by the Romans, who occupied Scotland from 43 to 410 AD. The Picts, a people who spoke a Celtic dialect, lived in Scotland until the 7th century. The Scots, who spoke a Gaelic language, arrived in Scotland in the 5th century.

8. The Scottish Reformation of 1560 was a major event in Scottish history. It marked the beginning of the end of the Catholic Church in Scotland and the start of a new Protestant church. The Reformation was led by John Knox, who was a religious leader and a scholar.

9. The Scottish Wars of Independence were a series of conflicts between Scotland and England. The wars lasted from 1332 to 1488 and were fought over control of Scotland.

10. Scotland was ruled by the English from 1371 to 1488. During this time, Scotland was a vassal state of England. The Scottish monarchs were forced to pay tribute to the English king.

11. The Scottish Enlightenment was a period of intellectual and cultural flourishing in Scotland. It lasted from the late 17th century to the early 19th century. The Scottish Enlightenment was marked by a spirit of inquiry and a love of learning.

12. The Scottish National Party was founded in 1934 by a group of Scottish politicians who were concerned about the future of Scotland. The party was led by J. H. Thomas and was based on the principles of nationalism and self-determination.

13. The Scottish National Party was a key player in the Scottish independence movement. It was active in the 1960s and 1970s and was a major force in the 1997 Scottish independence referendum, which was held to determine whether Scotland should become an independent country.

14. The Scottish National Party continues to be a major force in Scottish politics. It is currently the largest party in the Scottish Parliament and is led by Nicola Sturgeon, who has been the first minister of Scotland since 2014.